THE NEW CONGRESS.

The first session of the Forty-Fifth Con gress commences on the 15th inst., under a call from the President. The necessity for this extra session was created by the party which has a decided majority in the coming House of Representatives, and hence it is very difficult to even conjecture what will be its leading policy and duration. When we consider that a parsimonious and narrow-minded policy withheld the proper appropriations for the administration of d affairs in the several Departments of the Government, and when we know that the same party returns now to revise its Government, we are not flattered with the present House has not inherited the faults, follies and animosities of its predecessor, there may be some hope that justice will be done to the country under the present exigencies. The last House of Representatives seemed to regard it as its chief mission to persecute President GRANT and his subordinates in the Government, whether of high or low degree, to the very end of the chapter. Whether this new Congress comes with like animosities and hates towards President HAYES remains to be seen. We erely hope that it will come with no such spirations; that it will find a higher plane be just and wise in its action. It is to be survive, and these Leaguers will discover in the end that they are as harmless in this fight as they have always proved themselves again, let Congress set a proud example by leading of in that direction. Let it stay up the hands of the Executive and the various Departments of the Government with lib. appropriations. These are the sinews ent and of war, so far as they relate to that Department. For the want of this proper support our army has been without pay since June, and has presented a most deplorable condition of affairs. The tion, and the military arm of the Govern-ment was promptly punished therefor.

THE UNION LEAGUE.

New York city has an organization known as the Union League Club. It is social in its character, with political proclivities; and yet there is not enough of its social tendenries to render it companionable, nor of its political characteristics to give it influence political characteristics to give it influence or secure to it much respect beyond the mutual admiration of its own membership. It occasionally does a clever act, but offener makes itself ridiculous by the absurdity of its performances. HORACE GREELEY once characterized this club by terms far more pungent than ornate, but we never heard his opinion on that subject severely criticals.

The Union League Club has recently un dergone a political revival, and is now on the war-path for the scalp of Scuator Conkt.INu. Every member of that organization seems to have considered himself alluded to personally when the Senator referred to the "man milliner," and they rose to arms almost simultaneously, and made formal declaration of war against the offending Senator. A public meeting has been called at Cooper Institute, in which there will be a terrible fulmination of pent-up wrath No doubt resolutions of the most pungent No doubt resolutions of the most pungent character will be passed, which will be de-signed to annihilate Senator CONKLING, or main his political carcass for life, and yet we apprehend that "the war will not come up to the high-sounding plane of the manifesto." The doomed Senator will "still live" in the confidence and respect of the Republican party of the State of New York, and we think in the affections of the American people. If the Senator had ever appeared in any other role than that of of patriotism and duty, and will enter upon the work of providing for the necessities of the Government under a laudable desire to the shafts of his adversaries, but he is in the shafts of the shaft the shafts of his adversaries, but he is in-
